One Little Girl in Blue

"Confound that tune! When I'm at hom the girl next door is always thumping it on the piano, and whenever I'm out brass bands thunder it and hand organs squeak it! Suppose it will never wear out-sometime!" and with a sigh Ned Russell, a handsome bachelor of 40, knocked the ashes from his cigar and puffed away in silence. His friend was quiet a few moments, then laughed as he said: "Are you angry that it is "Two Little Girls in Blue' instead of one. I remember you were very attentive to Miss Wentworth last night, and must say I thought her blue gown becoming. Sorry you are so stirred up. Did she refuse you?"

The Sound steamer moved rapidly along in the moonlight, the noise of the water and the music of the band completely drowning the conversation of the many passenger trowded on deck enjoying the beauty of land, water, and sky, so the friends seated by the

Its Affairs in Hopeless and Irremediable Insolvency.

STATEMENT OF ITS PRESIDENT

Company Has Been Badly and Recklessly Managed and Has in Many Instances Seriously Violated Its Constitution and Laws.

PHILADELPHIA, May 18.-The Order of Conti made an assignment to the Land, Title and Trust Company and Francis Shunck Brown, the order's attorney, this afternoon, The assets are estimated at $1,250,000. full disclosure of the methods employed by the order and its officers, which have resulted in what looks to be a collapse of the order, is contained in the bill in equity filed in the common pleas court to-day.

The complainants, who comprise many of the general officers of the order, state that they are all members in good standing, having paid in sums ranging from $150 to $300, and that they are holders of relief fund certificates of $1,000 each. To meet the liabilities ac crued and to accrue upon the certificates of nembership issued the constitution and laws of the order required the respondents to establish a relief fund, and for that purpose to levy assessments upon all members equally. Notwithstanding this duty imposed upor them, the bill says, they did not during the earlier years of the order levy such assess ments as were necessary to create a relief and sufficient to meet the obligations of the order.

To show the hopeless insolvency of the order, the bill says that several hundred certificates providing for the payment of sums ranging from $200 to $1,000 have matured since March 21 last, requiring in the aggregate the payment of upward of $250,000, and these have not been paid, nor is there any sufficient fund upon which the order can draw.

During the next two years certificates will mature requiring the payment of $8,000,000, showing an average monthly liability, in addition to that already charged against the order, of $323,333.23. Besides this the order is now under an average liability of $25,000 per month for sick benefits, payable under its certificates. There are now about 16,000 members in good standing in the order, 15,000 of whom are, according to the position assumed by the defendants, liable to the payable of these according to the payable of the payable sumed by the accendants, lable to the pay-ment of three assessments per month.

At a session of the supreme lodge in Brook-lyn on April 23 last the then supreme secre-tary, D. H. Kenney, reported that the liabili-ties during the next two years from the ma-turing of certificates would be about $6,000,-600. After the adjournment of the supreme added the books were smithed and it was odge the books were audited, and it was

coo. After the adjournment of the supreme lodge the books were audited, and it was discovered that Kenney's estimate was $2,000,000 short of the exact liabilities, and to the extraordinary number of 200 assessments in a single call ten more were added.

During nins years of the order's history, and cutil April II. 1894, it is alleged, the order had collected from assessments levied for the purpose of relief $540,254.19. During a large part of this period there has been a membership approaching 25,000, from which this fund was received. It will require during the next two years the collection of $8,000,000 from a membership of 16,000 and now rapidly decreasing, and this sun, if collected, will discharge the liabilities of the order to my two years.

The order is involved, the bill says, in hopeless and irremediable insolvency in consequence of the neglect and mismanagement of the officers and the violation of its constitution and laws.

on and laws.

Like the bill previously filed, this one prays the court to grant an injunction restraining the order from levying the debit assessment or collecting any kinds of funds from the cercombering its asserts.

Supreme Fresident Clausen, when seen at his office this atternoon regarding the assignment, said that when he was first elected to the office, about the weeks ago, he began an investigation of the affairs of the order. "I found," he said, "that there was 250,000 of found. He said, that there was 259,000 of matured coefficients standing, with others rapidly approaching maturity, and without the necessary cash to pay them without draw-ing upon the reserve fund.

"Looking abond, I saw that in two years we would be called upon to pay out $7,000,000, and that the very best we could possibly do would be to have $3,000,000 to meet the demand. The order has been falling off in membership, and the does dropped suddenly from $100,000 to $108,000. We might have run along for five or six months, but at the end of that time the crash was sure to come. When I learned the financial standing of the order I decided that the very best thing to do for the members was to make an assign-ment."

A WOMAN AND MONEY. Will McNaughton Abscords with Manford

Riley's Wife and Savings. Manford Riley, a well-to-do contractor living at Takoma Park, has lost $1,600 in eash and his wife. Will McNaughton, night watchman at the livery stable of Bradley Bros., has also disappeared. Last Monday Riley missed his wife, but had no doubt of her early return until a day or two later, when he found that $1,600 in each, which he had hidden in a chest, was issing. It seems that McNaughton was originally

It seems that McNaughton was originally a sewing-machine agent. Several months ago he sold Mrs. Riley a machine. Since that time he has made frequent visits to the house in the absence of the husband, ostensibly for the purpose of repairing the sewing machine. The case has been placed in the hands of Private Detective McDevitt, and the couple Private Detective Medevit, and the couple are now supposed to be in Chicago.

Mrs. Riley is a charming woman of about 25 years, but by those who knew McNaughton it is not supposed that he would have aben her with him if he could have obtained the money without the woman. Mr. Riley is not instigating any search for his wife. He wants his cash.

"It's fifteen, Tom, but seems as if it might be fifty. I love her with my whole heart, but was jealous of everybody who looked at her, acted like an idiot and broke the engagement without giving any reason. She never replied to the note, simply returned my gifts and letters."

plied to the note, simply returned my gifts and letters."

"But you know of her through friends?" "Yes, indeed. Especially as I'm just returning from a visit to places dear to "auld lang syne."

"Not a word." Ned smoked awhile, then added; "You know she visited an aunt in Boston, but the family moved away long ago. That tune always calls her to mind. She wore the blue for her outing suits, for the rambles in mountains or at the seaside, and dainty light blue for afternoon and evening. Tou see, Tom, I loved her, and I can't love anybody else."

"Where?"

"Oh. Boston, Newport, Nonquit, the Vineyrd, and Nantucket."

Then they talked of the Summer of long ago and of the friends of both.

At last he asked the question which would naturally have come first, but he dreaded the answer, "And are you still May Burrowe?"

"Oh, yes," laughing. "School teachers don't marry, you know. That is, not often when they've taught as long as I have."

"How long is that?"

Then they talked again on topics here, there, and overywhere, but if was not easy to discover if she had been there during the conversation. Once he said: "To think you

k Speculation Heavy in Tone and Sugar Was the Weakest of All. NEW YORK, May 18.—The stock speculation day was heavy in tone during the greater part of the day, and although there were occasional recoveries, mainly caused by the covering of timid shorts, the trend of prices was downward and the closing figures show material losses compared with the final quotations of yesterday. The active list with the exception of General Electric shared in the depreciation in values, but Sugar was the weakest stock in the market. A very heavy pressure to sell was developed in this stock at the openius, which came principally from Washington houses, and which was believed to be for the account of these who purchased at lower figures and were endeavoring to realize profits of the advance. The bears also took a hand and largely increased the volume of business. With some slight railies the shares declined gradually, until a break of $4\text{j}$ per cent, had been made. A recovery of $\frac{1}{2}$ per cent, followed with a final reaction of $\frac{1}{2}$.

The heaviness of the Sugar stock was due to apprehension that the Senate investigation would result to the injury of the sugar interests, and might possibly lead to a less favorable tariff for sugar.

would result to the injury of the sugar many and might possibly lead to a less favorable tariff for sugar.

Manhattan was heavily sold on rumors that the rapid transit bill was to be signed and dropped 1/4 per cent to 16%, rallying 3/4 in the final trading. The decline in wheat was reflected in the depression in the grangors, which were disposed of on Chicago orders, chiefly in St. Paul, and Burlington and Quincy, Rock Island also came in for a good share of the selling and making an early loss of 1/4 per cent. St Paul fell off 1 per cent. and Burlington and Quincy, after an advance of 3/4, recoded 1 per cent. Northwest common reacted 3/4 and the preferred 3/4, the latter closing at the lowest point touched.

The others of the group received 3/4 as 3/4 per cent at the close. In sympathy with sugar, the Industrials were sold down, except General Electric, which was sirmly held, which at no time was more than 3/4 below yeaterday's closing and which gained 3/4 on the day. Tobacco is down 1/4; Cotton Oil, 1/4; Eubber, 3/4; do, preferred, 1/2 Cohaolidated Gas, 1/4, and Chicago Gas, 3/4.

and which gained 44 on the day, Todacco is down 145; Cotion Oil, 145; Rubber, 25; do, preferred, 1; Consolidated Gas, 136, and Chicago Gas, 35.

Some of the specialties made heavy losses on the day, including Oregon Navigation, 2; Richmond Torminal preferred, 25; Wheeling and Lake Erie preferred, 13, The other more notable declines were 8; Paul and Omaha, 2; Louisville and Nashville, 15; Erie preferred, 14, and Missouri Pacific, Louisville, New Albany, Iowa Central preferred, Cedar Falls and Minn., and Long Island Traction Company, 1 per cent. The other losses were mere fractional, except that of Cordage preferred, which sold at 33 against 40, the last previous sale.

In the final trading the covering of short contracts caused a recovery on the general list, and the market closed firmer in tone than it was any other time in the day. The bond market was weak all day, in sympathy with the stock market, the leading changes in prices being:

He tried to think how long the lady had been there, but could not. The camp chair next to her was vacant. Had it been occunext to her was vacant. Had it been occupied during the evening? At first he thought. "Yes, by a lady"—then he was equally sure it was a gentleman—then concluded he didn't know. He was thankful he had had sense enough to lift his hat. should be so near me and I not know it."
And she replied. "Well, it isn't strange you shouldn't recognize the back of my head, especially in the dark."

The band commenced a "Medley of Popular Airs," and soon the "Two Little Girls in Biue" rang out. Miss Burrowe looked away and seemed lost in thought. Her companion exclaimed, "What a pretty air that is! I don't wonder it's so popular." She turned in open-eyed surprise, and he said quickly, leaning his head lower to catch her answer, "Then you heard what we said?"

"I couldn't help it, Yes, I heard."

"May I repeat it?"

"Yes,"
And he did.

When school No. — opened that fall Miss Burrowe was not there, and some of the teachers had received invitations to a wed-ding in September. M. M. W.

across my mind as I sat at work on the "plan" which was to show the running of trains. I passed many pleasant hours in reverie when rork was slack, but the nature of my task forbade attention to anything except the board before me, on which I was winding the strings which represented trains, twisting them in and out among the pers that stood for stations and crossings. One blunder might mean a wreek and the loss of many might mean a wreck and the loss of many lives.

On the night preceding the day on which the new schedule was to go into operation I went to my home after an exceedingly fatiguing day, owing to the strain of constant application figuring out the train service. I had been expecting the return of the certain bright-eyed young woman of my dreams, who had been upon a visit in a near-by city, and in the smoke of a cigar I built easiles of anticipation while sented in the big arm chair in my coxy room.

The telegraph instrument at the head of my bed, which I always kept near enough to reach without getting up, elicked occasionally. As the twilight deepened into night I heard the chirp of crickets in the bog across the way. The old tree with branches covering the house rustled its leaves in a sweet initially.

I fell askep.

help. I rose from my chair and hurried to-ward the familiar figure. It receded, seemed to turn, and I saw it beckoning to me to fol-low. I stumbled forward with staring eyes and eager impatience. The face and figure were certainly Carrie Dana's, but she did not speak.

Now we reached a railroad track, and the ghost, if such it was, turned northward, and seemed to flit over the ties like a bird. I followed blindly.

Suddenly the whistle of a locomotive-two short, sharp and shrill echoes—sounded in my ears. Around the curve came the snortmy ears. Around the curve came the snorting from monster. I was transfixed. It seemed as if my limbs were of lead. I could not move. The engine came thundering on amid a cloud of dust, for the brakes were on and the great wheels were grinding themselves to powder under the awful pressure. I closed my eyes and waited. There was a terrible pause, a suspense that made my blood run cold. The engine was now within a few feet of me. The appartition had melted from my view. I braced myself for the end. The pilot of the engine was at my feet. Just them a shout rang in my ears. I felt sturned and bewildered, but distinctly felt a hand on my shoulder and heard a voice:

"Hello, Tom! What you doing here? Well, surrounded by old friends, all train hands, who had come forward to learn what caused the sharp call for "down brakes." Congratulations on my narrow escape had hardly been exchanged when the low rumble of a distant train was heard in the rails where we stood,

"My God, Clancy, there comes a train!"
The brakeman of the rear car, who was at my side, bounded down the track like a deer, swinging his red lantern violently before him. We beard the whistle of danger, and knew the red signal light had been seen. Engineer Clancy sprang into his cab and reversed the lever of the standing frain to back up if possible and lessen the force of the collision. The oneoming express was under frightful speed, but was finally brought to a dead stand within a few feet of where we had been grouped.

The passengers poured out of the conches

The passengers poured out of the coaches to learn what had happened. Among the was a bright-syed, handsome young woman, who pushed her way to the front. and with a cry of joy sprang into my arms.

"Tom!"
"Carrie!"
Who will say that I walked in my sleep in vain that night. Who will say that the spirit of love did not interfere to save me from the responsibility of an awful blunder which I must have made that day in the office while dreaming of the girl I loved. Two trains on one track! But love conquered death.
